DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTICS

The Security Officer II class differs from the Security Officer I in that incumbents operate with a greater degree of independence, encountering a wider range of situations requiring tact, diplomacy and a broader knowledge of police methods, techniques and procedures. Security Officers II are assigned to positions of leadership, responsible for training Security Officers, may be acting supervisor in the absence of Security Supervisor, and may be assigned primary responsibility for providing work direction and guidance to temporary, hourly Security Officers and investigation assignments. Patrol assignments for a Security Officer II are more likely to be in areas requiring an experience officer.
